Forecast for Saturday 12 Nov 2022

Weather: Mainly dry in the early hours, an isolated shower in the west. After a dry start thickening cloud and outbreaks of rain will spread northwards for a time from mid-morning onwards. Turning dry from the south during the early part of the afternoon.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 800m: 50%, best chance of clear summits will be in the morning, especially Torridon northwards.

Low cloud and visibility: Starting off clear with good visibility. Areas of low cloud between 600 and 900 metres will extend northwards from mid-morning, this most extensive across southern Lochaber and Skye with some patchy cloud down to 400 metres across southern Skye for a time. Cloud will thin from the south in the afternoon with patches down to 800 metres inland, but low cloud remaining fairly widespread though across Skye and northern Lochaber.
